Firemen Reinforce Police in Attempt to Stop Demonstration in Front of Publication Office—Ambassador Wilson Requests Expulsion From Country of Objectionable Correspondents—American Residents of Capital Organize Military Company.

Mexico City, April 2.—By order of the government the Heraldo Mexicano has been suppressed and the president of the company, Paul Hudson, has been threatened with expulsion if he persists in attempting to print the paper. The suppression of the newspaper aroused the opposition of the newsboys, who rallied to the support of the publishers. They called out police, who in turn called on the fire department for help. The latter threw streams of water on the boys, while the police surrounded the building and prevented anyone from entering. Later, 300 newsboys paraded the streets, shouting their protests and demanding a "free press."

More Solons May Face Columbus Grand Jury.

Columbus, O., April 2.—In addition to the possibility of perjury indictments being returned against a number of state senators by the April grand jury it is rumored there is a probability of a number of bribery indictments being returned against senators who thus far have escaped.

It is asserted that the state has evidence against others which never has been laid before the grand jury, but which, strengthened by recent developments, in all probability will be given to the jurors for consideration and indictments asked to be returned by the prosecutor.

Some even venture the assertion that wholesale indictments will be returned as in former investigations. Though Burns detectives left the work immediately after the exposure and grand jury investigations last spring, other operatives have been on the job continually since, and much additional evidence has been uncovered, it is said.

Cetone Next In Line.

Columbus, O., April 2.—Senator George K. Cetone of Dayton may be the next of the indicted legislators to be placed on trial. It is understood that the state is thinking seriously of taking up his case next, deferring the second trial of Senator I. E. Hoffman until later.

Fraud Charged In Everglades Land Scandal

Grand Jury Indicts Four In Florida Everglades Scandal.

Washington, April 2.—The grand jury returned indictments against Charles E. Elliott, former chief of drainage investigations of the agricultural department; A. G. Moorehouse, former acting chief; Ray P. Teel, former assistant chief of irrigation investigations; and Frank C. Singleton, former accountant of the department of agriculture, on the charge of presenting or approving false vouchers against the United States and making false certificates in order to obtain the approval and payment of such claims. The indictments grow out of the so-called Everglades investigation by the department of agriculture.

The Streets Converted Into Rivers By Flood

Residents of Hickman, Ky., Have Close Call When Levee Breaks.

Hickman, Ky., April 2.—With suddenness that jeopardized lives of lowland dwellers, despite elaborate preparations to warn them, the Mississippi river levee broke here and a current went racing through the streets of Hickman that reached a depth of from two to eight feet within an hour.

No lives were lost, but homeless persons are wandering about in the rain, seeking shelter. Water is six inches deep in the stores and is rising.

The damage incurred by the break is estimated at not less than $100,000.

CAPTAIN SCOTT SENDS NARRATIVE OF ADVENTURES

London, April 2.—A narrative of his trip has been received here from Captain Scott, who sent it to Akroa, N. Z., by his ship, the Terra Nova. It covers the movements of his party from Jan. 25, 1911, to Jan. 3, 1912. On the latter date he was in latitude 87 degrees 32 minutes south and had reached an altitude of 9,800 feet. Unlike the easy experience of Amundsen as related by the latter, Scott met with the greatest difficulties, thrilling adventures and had weather.

While laying depots on Feb. 16, 1911, Scott reports that one of the dog teams fell into a crevasse and Scott himself had an escape from death that was little short of marvelous. He found an ice bridge over which he made his way to safety. Three hours were consumed in the work of rescuing the dogs.

Columbus, O., April 2.—After much discussion among themselves the wet delegates in the constitutional convention have caused to be introduced the long-heralded amendment to keep all saloons in existence at present under the license system, if that is adopted.

It was in the form of a resolution presented by Mr. Smith of Hamilton, instructing the committee on arrangement and phraseology to make amendments to the Anderson license proposal, agreed upon some weeks ago, so that it will retain present retail liquor men in business. Mr. Anderson made a point of order against it, which he said he would not press when the convention reaches the resolution today. An attempt by Mr. Smith to have it printed failed.

Executives, in Their Brief, Declare Nothing in Constitution to Give Congress Control Over Commerce of States—Say People Do Not Live For Trade Alone—Deplore Attempt to Break Down Barriers Between Federal and State Authority.

Washington, April 2.—In the United States supreme court arguments were begun in the important 2-cent rate cases arising in the states. The cases are popularly known as the "Minnesota rate" and affiliated cases. The question involved is the conflict of federal and state power in regulating commerce. The arguments will extend over two weeks.

The attorney general of Missouri opened the argument and the law officers of half a dozen states are in Washington awaiting their turn. Governor Harmon of Ohio, on behalf of the committee composed of himself, Governor Hadley of Missouri and Governor Aldrich of Nebraska, filed a brief as Amici Curiae, after having secured leave to do so from the court. The three governors constitute a committee appointed by the conference of governors at Spring Lake, N. J., last summer, to present the subject to the supreme court. Governor Harmon presented the resolution to the conference that led to the appointment of the committee. Governor Harmon's brief contends for the power of the states, respectively, to regulate commerce within their borders.

"The right of the states," said Governor Harmon and his associates, "to regulate their own commerce is as clear and broad as that of congress to regulate interstate commerce. There is nothing in the constitution to indicate an intention to make the exercise of this right secondary or incidental to the regulation of interstate commerce by congress or dependent thereon in any wise. The right conferred (federal right to regulate interstate commerce) and the right reserved are alike absolute as to each other and neither is relative or dependent on the other."

Enjoined by Judge Sanborn.

It will be recalled that in the Minnesota rate case, in which Judge Sanborn of the United States circuit court enjoined the local state rate, the reason given was that the state rate was lower than the interstate rate that had been fixed and approved by the interstate commerce commission. The effect of upholding the state-prescribed rate would therefore be to force a reduction of the interstate rate and to that extent the state's power would amount to a regulation of interstate commerce and be a burden on the same.

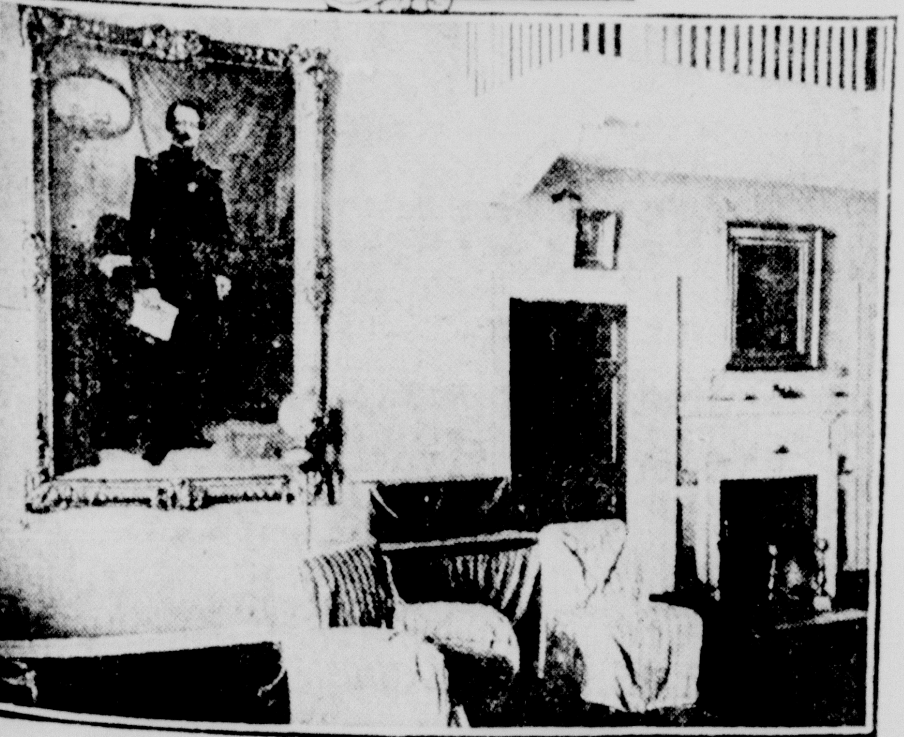

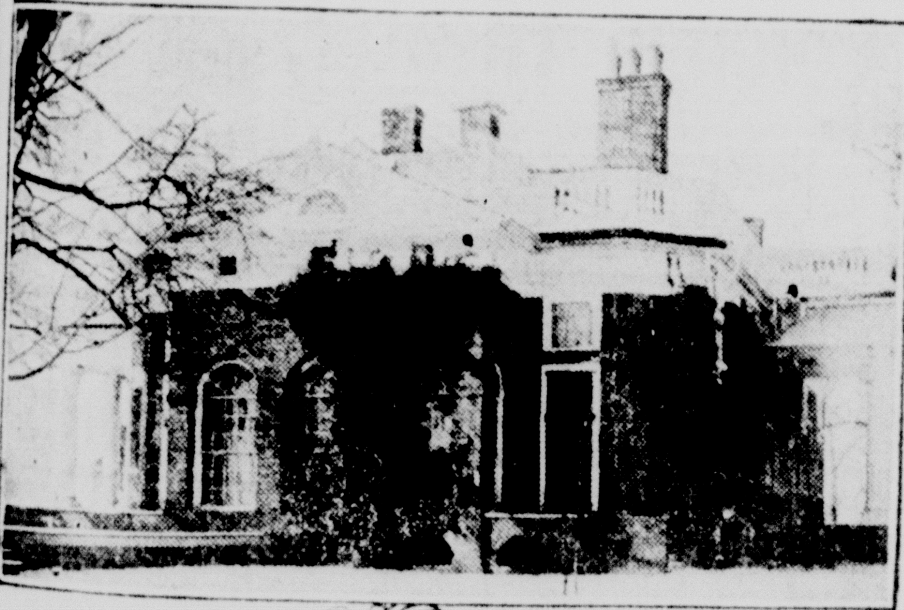

Replying to Judge Sanborn's contentions, the governor of Ohio in his brief says:

"The vice of the decision lies in its plain disregard of the provisions of the federal constitution, which establishes the relations between the nation and the states. Commerce is important, but we do not live for trade alone, and can not afford to let our institutions be sacrificed for the sake of it."

"We should have no union if the constitution had not made the internal commerce of the states distinct from other commerce and left full control of the former with the states when it gave full control over the latter to congress. Embarrassments may arise from time to time to enterprises extending to a number of states and having to comply with state as well as federal laws, but all of these, especially railroads, have nevertheless grown and prospered amazingly, and there is no reason why they should not continue to do so without seeking through the courts to break down the barriers between federal and state authority which safeguard the individual liberty of citizens."

Plan to Buy Monticello, Old Home of Jefferson

SENATOR MARTINE of New Jersey recently introduced at Washington a resolution authorizing the appointment of a joint committee of congress to consider the feasibility of buying Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, near Charlottesville, Va., and preserving it as a national memorial. Jefferson brought his bride to the new house in 1772. It was then very small, but it was subsequently enlarged in accordance with the needs of the family and embodies many of the architectural ideas which he imbibed in the course of his European journeys. It has the appearance of an Italian villa, with a Greek portico and many of the characteristics of colonial architecture. A French visitor said of Jefferson in 1782, "He is the first American who has consulted the fine arts to know how to shelter himself from the weather." Monticello was the statesman's home for fifty-six years. It is now the property of Jefferson M. Levy, a Democratic representative in congress from a New York city district. The lower photograph shows a part of the residence hall of the famous mansion.

Defense Loses Two Points In Hall Case

Judge Rules Out Testimony of Alleged Poison Victim.

Lancaster, O., April 2.—By the ruling of Judge Reeves the defense in the Nancy Hall murder case lost two important points.

They first introduced O. R. Witham of Columbus and expected to prove by him that he had used the same brand of pancake flour that figures so prominently in the Hall case and had become ill. The court ruled the testimony irrelevant as to the Witham experience with the flour and sustained an objection of the state to strike it out.

Isaac Stout of Pleasant township, Mrs. Clara Bay of Lancaster and Mrs. Lucy Pearce were introduced to give testimony along the same line, but their testimony was stricken out. Mrs. Bay and Mrs. Pearce both stated that they had purchased the flour about the time of the Hall trouble.

Another important point of the defense knocked out by the judge was the testimony of Charles Mowery, an insurance agent. The defense expected to weaken the motive set up by the state by showing that this agent had solicited her to take out more insurance several weeks before the death of Ruth, but she had refused.

Mr. Anderson made a point of order against it, which he said he would not press when the convention reaches the resolution today. An attempt by Mr. Smith to have it printed failed.

The amendment is said to be substantially the one for which the wet delegates are fighting.

lobby is said to have bargained with certain leaders of the convention.

By a vote of 60 to 35 the convention upset after a debate of nearly three hours' duration a plan by which $5,000 required to print the convention debates, be used in the circulation of pamphlets to advertise the convention's work. Instead it awarded to F. J. Heer Co. of Columbus the contract for printing the debates in two volumes. The cost will be $1,500.

Bigelow Refused to Vote.

Peculiar interest attached to the proposition for the reason that many members said they suspected that the plan not to print the debates was a device of President Bigelow to obtain funds to carry on the campaign before the people. It was championed by one of his strongest supporters, Delegate Watson of Guernsey county, chairman of the committee on printing and publication. Mr. Watson's majority report went to the scrap heap. The president refused to vote on the question.

During the discussion an economy plea made in behalf of the proposition to refer the printing to the general assembly was ridiculed by a showing that the convention still has more than $20,000 out of its appropriation of $200,000 and will have $20,000 left by April 30. Mr. Hall declared some of the members do not want their speeches on certain proposals preserved.

SIDEWALK IMPROVEMENTS THE GREATEST IN YEARS

COUNCIL MEETING BUSY ONE

Many Sidewalks to Be Rebuilt This Spring and Summer, and Other Improvements Ordered. Safety Committee Given More Time.

"Rotten Work" on East Temple and Green Streets Will Be Investigated—Railroads Must Look After Much-needed Street, Sidewalk and Crossing Repairs.

Considerable business in the way of taking steps for sidewalk improvements and other matters of more or less importance, was transacted by council Monday night, all members being present and ready for work.

A resolution to construct 8-foot cement sidewalks on Hinde street from Court to Paint street was first to be introduced, and passed, insuring a much needed improvement on one of the most important streets in the city. The question of allowing the sidewalk to be set over 2 feet and 5 inches along the terrace on the west side of the street from Temple to Paint, was discussed and the action allowed.

Durant raised the question of Council's jurisdiction over removing sidewalks in fair condition to build new ones, and Solicitor Rankin held that the action of Council was almost final in the case.

Another resolution to construct 8-foot sidewalks on North street from Court to Paint was passed after some discussion, Cox voting against its passage. Cox stated that as there had not been a petition he deemed it wrong to vote for it, as there was some good sidewalk on the street.

Upon call, Solicitor Rankin explained the ruling he had received from the State Board of Accounting regarding the collection of special assessments by the county treasurer. Durant, as chairman of the Safety Committee, stated that the committee was not ready to make another report on the water works trouble, but said the committee had a number of meetings and had arranged for the presence of the president and legal adviser of the Washington Water company, to take up the accusation that a violation of franchise had been made by the water company. More time was granted.

A petition to improve High street from Circle avenue to Elm street was presented and a resolution passed to improve the street as petitioned for.

The cost will be approximately $1.23 per lineal foot. The improvement will consist of grading and macadamizing. In reading the resolution Clerk Flynn insisted on omitting the reading of that part fixing the grade, as "no one would understand it anyhow," but upon advice of Solicitor Rankin the entire resolution was read.

A petition to lay a sewer on Yeoman street was referred to the solicitor for an opinion as to its legality, to report at the next meeting, the solicitor having left the room when the matter came up.

Another petition to improve Henkle street from Hinde to Water Street, by laying 5-foot sidewalks, was read and a resolution ordered drawn to cover the improvement.

Chapman presented a petition signed by property owners on Dayton avenue, who protested against the condition of the sewer along that street. Veall first made a motion to have the Service Director look after the trouble, and some question being raised as to the extent of repairs and right to make them, the motion was changed to have the Service Director and Engineer to investigate and report at the next meeting.

Frank Johnson asked Council to pass a general ordinance to compel sprinkling with oil to keep the dust down, and made mention of muddy streets; took occasion to remark that the water mains on Hinde street were just as good as the day they were put down, and mentioned the need of street repair and his willingness to pay his part on any improvement of Hinde street. The oiling question drifted into other channels and later when it was mentioned and it was brought out that 60 to 90 days must elapse before the ordinance would permit oiling, nothing was done.

Fred Mark, who has contracted on a number of streets to sprinkle with oil, was present and took part in the discussion. He has several tanks of oil ordered and is making more contracts for doing the work, so that council may take no action at present.

Rothrock mentioned the repair of North street, stating that during the past eight years the street had been improved by macadamizing some three times, and was now in as bad a condition as ever. He mentioned having advocated a brick center for Market street.

The recent action of Council in allowing the Pennsylvania railroad to withdraw a portion of the property taxed on the Sycamore street improvement was mentioned by Rothrock, who asked that an investigation be made. He also spoke of the East Temple street improvement made by Contractors Bell, Blades and Hays, stating that the newly laid cement had broken and settled down in places, and he wanted it looked after. Faulty work on the Green street improvement was alleged, and he made a motion that the "rotten work" be investigated, the investigation to cover East Temple and Green streets, and the withdrawal of certain property on Sycamore street as above mentioned.

Then the East Temple street "improvement" came in for a general lambasting. Veall asserting that part of the work was under water and that the filling had washed out; that the county had turned a large volume of water loose on the city in that neighborhood, and that the $3,500 sewer laid a few years ago was not doing the work it should do. He wanted the Service Director to look after the trouble.

N. S. Craig, Lewis street grocer, was lavish in his abuse of the improvement, and said the specifications called for 6 inches of gravel at the curb and 12 in the center of the street improved, but a scant half of this amount of poor gravel had been placed on the street, and that $90 to $900 loads of earth was necessary to complete the grade as it should be. He also said that the sewer made a sharp dip under the water mains, causing the sewer to be anything but desirable.

The street improvement has not been accepted it is claimed. A motion to have the service director and engineer to investigate and report at the next meeting, was unanimously adopted.

Veall spoke of action a year or more ago, looking toward the laying of sidewalks along the Pennsylvania and C. H. & D. railroad properties on South Main, South Fayette and South North streets, and nothing having been done, he made a motion to improve the streets from the railroad bridge on each street, by laying cement sidewalks and vitrified brick crossings.

The motion carried by every vote, and an improvement which has been needed for years, will probably be made the coming summer, and the deplorable walks and crossings changed to modern ones.

Upon motion by Chapman, the clerk was instructed to request the B. & O., C. H. & D. and D. T. & I. railroads to improve the street, sidewalks and crossings in the B. & O. depot vicinity along its property. The need of a good crossing on Paint street at the intersection of Paint and Hinde streets, was mentioned, and this will be constructed when the improvement is made on Hinde street.

Adjournment was then taken until Monday night of next week.

Glee Club Concert Splendid Success

The Wooster Glee club gave its initial concert in this city Monday night at Memorial Hall, and left in its wake encomiums so enthusiastic, approval so genuine that its second coming will need little heralding.

The Wooster Glee club richly deserves to rank with the big college clubs and the concert of last night should have been greeted with a packed house. However, considering the deluge of rain, the attendance was good and what it lacked in numbers was made up in enthusiasm.

The club is composed of twenty voices of unusually good timbre and strength. The ensemble numbers were splendidly rendered, the volume surprising and the voices in fine harmony.

The opening number "Winter Song" captivated at once and the various glee club selections vied with each other for preference.

One of the finest numbers was "The Sword of Ferrara," sung with magnificent volume and expression. The always pleasing melody of "Annie Laurie," the beautiful Malloy-Holcomb arrangement of "Just a Song at Twilight" and the funny glee "Wot Cher!" in cockney English, were all received with hearty encores.

The club quartet was exceptionally good and throughout the work of the boys was characterized with true college spirit and zest.

The hit of the evening was a genuinely clever original skit, a grand opera takeoff. It was put on in costume and its burlesque acting was side splitting and brought forth a storm of applause.

The solo numbers were well received, Mr. Weygandt, bass soloist; Mr. Richards, tenor, and Miss Edith Adams, the artistic accompanist, playing a piano solo, which evinced great brilliancy and musical interpretation. An instrumental number by guitars, mandolin and flutes was taking.

The reader, Mr. Wayne Putnam, proved an entertainer of ability, his dialect work very good.

Altogether the concert was enjoyed far beyond the usual run of entertainments, the club closed the program effectively by singing with heartsome loyalty, "Wooster Love Song."

W. C. T. U. SOCIAL SESSION.

The last social session of W. R. C. which was held at the home of Mrs. B. F. Leiland was a very enjoyable affair.

Forty women engaged in a spirited spelling match. Mrs. Laura Gregg was presented with a handsome flowering plant for spelling the most words correctly. Mrs. Briggs received the consolation prize.

A sister of Mrs. James Poole from Kansas, was an out-of-town guest. The house was appropriately decorated in the national colors.

Assisting hostesses: Mesdames Poole, Hamm, Clifton, Mills, Eckles, Henkle, Martin.

SIDEWALK IMPROVEMENTS THE GREATEST IN YEARS

COUNCIL MEETING BUSY ONE

Many Sidewalks to Be Rebuilt This Spring and Summer, and Other Improvements Ordered. Safety Committee Given More Time.

"Rotten Work" on East Temple and Green Streets Will Be Investigated—Railroads Must Look After Much-needed Street, Sidewalk and Crossing Repairs.

Considerable business in the way of taking steps for sidewalk improvements and other matters of more or less importance, was transacted by council Monday night, all members being present and ready for work.

A resolution to construct 8-foot cement sidewalks on Hinde street from Court to Paint street was first to be introduced, and passed, insuring a much needed improvement on one of the most important streets in the city. The question of allowing the sidewalk to be set over 2 feet and 5 inches along the terrace on the west side of the street from Temple to Paint, was discussed and the action allowed.

Durant raised the question of Council's jurisdiction over removing sidewalks in fair condition to build new ones, and Solicitor Rankin held that the action of Council was almost final in the case.

Another resolution to construct 8-foot sidewalks on North street from Court to Paint was passed after some discussion, Cox voting against its passage. Cox stated that as there had not been a petition he deemed it wrong to vote for it, as there was some good sidewalk on the street.

Upon call, Solicitor Rankin explained the ruling he had received from the State Board of Accounting regarding the collection of special assessments by the county treasurer.

Durant, as chairman of the Safety Committee, stated that the committee was not ready to make another report on the water works trouble, but said the committee had a number of meetings and had arranged for the presence of the president and legal adviser of the Washington Water company, to take up the accusation that a violation of franchise had been made by the water company. More time was granted.

A petition to improve High street from Circle avenue to Elm street was presented and a resolution passed to improve the street as petitioned for.

"SIS PERKINS."

There is so much that is good in the rural comedy drama, "Sis Perkins" that no one wonders at the unusual success that has been accorded to the play. Its realistic pictures of country life appeal to all classes, for in it is found comedy and pathos, laughter and tears. It is clean and wholesome; its humor is crisp and quaint, and its bits of homely philosophy are remembered and laughed at over and over again.

The presentation of this famous play at the Empire Opera House on Friday April 5, will introduce a carefully selected company, and the engagement promises to be a record-breaker.

LEO KATZ & CO.

Mr. Henry Hildebrandt, one of the well known retired business men of this city, was married in Wilmington last Thursday evening to Mrs. Elizabeth W. Miller, a prominent and wealthy widow of that city.

Rev. Purdy, of the Friends church, performed the ceremony at the home of the bride, where Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrandt expect to make their home for the present. Instead of taking a wedding trip they remained at their residence.

The marriage was kept a secret and is only just now becoming known to the surprise of a large circle of friends, both in Wilmington and this city.

Mr. Hildebrandt's early home was in Wilmington and he returns by no means a stranger in a strange land. It is hope by friends and business acquaintances in this city that he will later decide to make this city again.

Rev. T. W. Locke, officiated Tuesday morning at a quiet wedding which united in marriage Mr. Henry Ward, son of Mrs. Willard Ward, and Miss Edna Dale, the pretty daughter of Mr. Frank Dale. The ceremony was performed at Grace parsonage at ten o'clock.

The happy couple went at once to their own home, which is costly furnished and in readiness, on East Market street.

They have the best wishes of many friends.

Two Good Ones Added to Course

The Jeffersonville Lecture Course committee has closed a deal which means much for the patrons of that course, by being able to furnish two high class lecturers in place of Dr. Gunsaulus, whose date was cancelled on account of sickness.

Instead of Dr. Gunsaulus they will have Hon. Frank J. Cannon, who was on the Washington course this season. He will appear Saturday night, April 6th.

Mr. Cannon has appeared on many of the largest courses this year, but does not often go to a town the size of Jeffersonville.

SHOULD THEY BE PENSIONED?

The retirement some weeks ago of two veteran employees of the New York postoffice each after continuous service of nearly fifty years and the subsequent action of the Postmaster General in taking steps to insure both of these faithful public servants a competency for life, has revived again the discussion of the proposition to pension public servants.

The New York cases bring to mind another case which occurred in Chicago and which, in a great many respects similar to the New York cases.

In the windy city a Chicago man resigned his position after nearly sixty-two years of continuous service in the postal department, and his resignation was accepted.

It is pointed out by the advocates of a pension provision that these cases illustrate the grave need of some provision for the more humane treatment of government servants who grow old in the line of duty. If these men, it is urged, had worked for similar terms in the employ of a railroad, a great industrial corporation, or almost any foreign government, they would have been automatically retired with substantial pensions for the remainder of their days. It is beyond belief, is the claim, that with all its claims to leadership in the ways of enlightenment, the United States should lag behind most of the world in this regard.

The three cases cited and the facts given to the public in connection therewith, would seem to indicate that the government was not generous and not even just or appreciate of faithful service extended over a long series of years.

Those advocates of the pension for public servants doctrines say nothing of the compensation given to these faithful servants during all the years they have been employed.

Those who oppose the pension theory urge that millions of American citizens are not fortunate enough to secure a position in the government departments where at good salary they cannot be disturbed during good behavior.

When the favorable side of extreme cases is urged in support of a pension rule, people should not be unmindful of the fact that unlike the military department, the service is not compulsory.

Any government employee has the right to quit and better his condition at any time. He is neither obliged to enter nor having entered, to remain in the government service.

If the compensation is generous and in the absence of a contrary assertion, we must presume it is, else there would not be so many applicants for civil service positions and the employee is thrifty he should be able, in the absence of misfortune, to lay aside a competency.

The government does not afford to every man the opportunity to work in its departments controlled by civil service rules and fortunate above millions of others is the man who is given the chance to make good.

The pension plan is, while a meritorious one, nevertheless one which should be guarded from extremes which would embarrass the nation by entailing an unnecessary burden upon the citizens just as indiscriminate charity may impoverish individuals.

Voluntary service and service compelled in times of national peril, when men must sacrifice personal interests for natural good should be distinguished. Special cases deserving it, owing to the peculiar conditions surrounding them, should receive earnest consideration and just treatment.

Women With the Ballot Would Not Clean Politics

By FRANCIS HOWARD WILLIAMS of the Pennsylvania Historical Society

THE EXTENSION OF THE BALLOT TO WOMEN WOULD INCREASE POLITICAL CORRUPTION MANY FOLD.

For every woman of the better class there are SIX OF ANOTHER CLASS, irresponsible, slatternly and devoid of the finer sense peculiar to the sex, whose votes could be bought not for $1, as the votes of many men are now bought, but for 25 cents. These women, and not those to whom the right of suffrage would be justifiable, are the ones who would vote. Suffrage would not clean up politics. It would CORRUPT IT FURTHER. It would make it more EQUITABLE, and there has been a general feeling of the woman toward those things which she has been denied the privilege of voting. She is now denied the privilege of voting, but she is not relieved of THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF CIVIL DUTIES.

Out of the performance of the duties which devolved upon man by natural laws he has had to assume the responsibilities of protection and aggression falling to him by virtue of stronger physical power developing into his right of the ballot. The right of a voice in making the laws is bound up in the duties attending upon man's sphere, and it is AN IMPOSSIBILITY TO SUBVERT THE OPERATION OF THE NATURAL LAWS. We might as well attempt to change gravitation.

How we all point with pride
To our party's achievements,
While the Stars and the Stripes

Dreams He Kicked Dog And Breaks Great Toe

Dreaming that he was kicking a "dawg" around a prominent resident of the Clarksburg neighborhood, Ross county, recently kicked so hard that the great toe of one foot struck the bed and was dislocated.

The man, who is said to have a great dislike for the "Houn' Dawg" song dreamed that he was walking down the street of Clarksburg village and met a large dog.

Closer acquaintance with the dream dog demonstrated to his subconscious mentality that the imaginary animal was suffering from a hypothetical attack of rabies. Furthermore, the dream dog came straight at him, frothing at the mouth, and showing every indication of an intention to bite the respectable citizen.

Up to this point everything was transpiring in the subconscious state only, but, according to leading psychologists of Deerfield township, the physical being of the dreamer was called upon to participate just when he resolved to resist the bite of the dream dog, and he landed the dog an awful kick.

The resistance was successful. The kick was a powerful one and demolished the dog, woke up the dreamer with a howl, and set him to work hunting a liniment bottle. At that point his wife awoke. She saw him sitting upon the edge of the bed, and asked in surprise:

"What are you doing?"
"Wrapping up my big toe; what d'ye s'pose?"

"Wrapping up your toe? What for?"
"Did I kick you?"
"No. What are you talking about?"
"Well, I dreamed I was kickin' a dog around, and I certainly kicked something. I've broke my big toe."

Ed Somers, the foreman, has fitted up his hand-car with a new gasoline engine, 1 1/2 horse power, doing away with the old back-breaking hand-power. It is quite an odd sight to see the car go sailing along and the men riding at ease. This is a decidedly new departure and a much improved method of motive power over the old. So far it is a success in every way and in time may be adopted by other sections. Needle Drawn From Child's Leg

While bathing her daughter, Ruby, aged 5, on Thursday evening, Mrs. Thomas T. England of East Scioto township, Ross county, discovered a peculiar lump on the fleshy part of the child's right leg and further investigation revealed that there was something in it. Mr. England, who was away from home, was called, and he soon discovered it was a needle and with a pair of pinchers he drew it out.

The little girl has been an invalid almost since birth and how the needle got into her body is a mystery to the entire family. It was a sewing needle of the largest size and no doubt gave the child much pain. Since it was extracted Ruby has been recovering rapidly and her parents are now hopeful that she may become well. They had spent hundreds of dollars for medical help but without avail.

The members of the family do not think that the child swallowed the needle, but can't imagine how it entered her body without them knowing something about it at the time it happened.

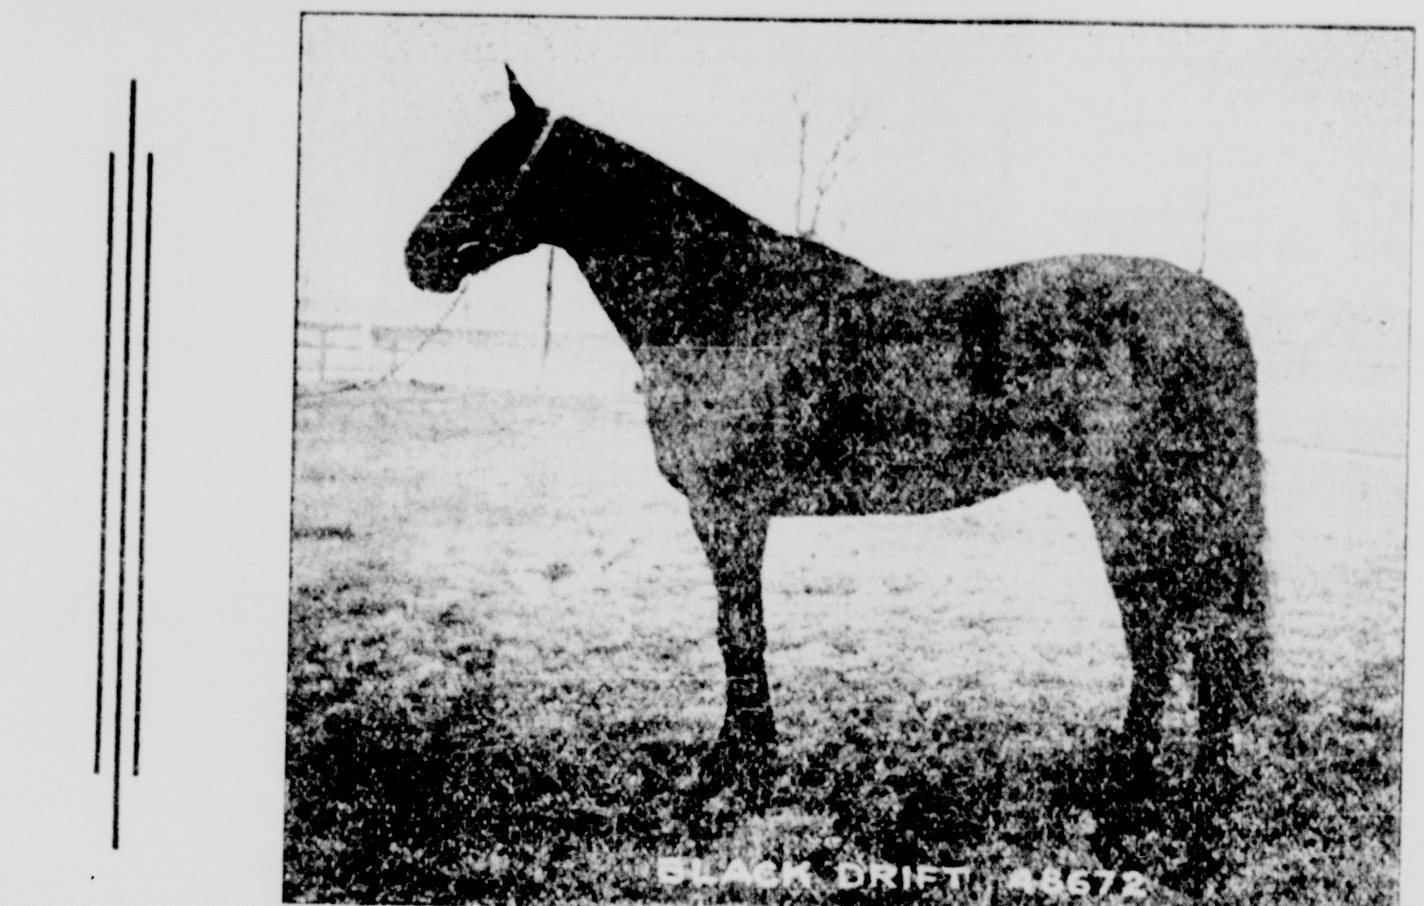

A Good Neighbor

An advertisement in "Country Life in America," reads thus: "For sale to a gentleman who will be a good neighbor, a most attractive and interesting country place of about 22 acres." The owner proposes to build on a tract adjoining and so he is careful to sell to one who will prove a good neighbor. This is a prime consideration—to have a good neighbor.

It is a sad burden to a place to have a bad neighbor, a person of low ideas, and low talk, who has mean streaks in him, and lawless, unprincipled children. A palace with a bad neighbor is not half so nice as a cottage with a good neighbor. Down goes the value of real estate when an undesirable neighbor moves in next door.

What a poor opinion a person must have of himself when he realizes that he is a poor neighbor, that his presence is an affliction, that the community would be better off without him. One of the most practical questions that comes to a man is "Am I a good neighbor?"—Ohio State Journal.

Jones, of Toledo, and other capitalists, has been purchased by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, at a cost of $3,000,000, according to announcement of O. R. & W. officials at Zanesville.

The transfer is said to include also considerable coal rights in Belmont county, which will be developed at once. According to plans of the new owners the road will be converted into a standard gauge line at once and numerous ramifications which will penetrate every corner of the rich Belmont county coal fields will be built. Zanesville is to be made the distributing point for this coal.

The deal was closed at Zanesville yesterday through Attorney F. A. Durban, division counsel for the Pennsylvania railroad.

Free Delivery For Everybody

Extension of free mail delivery service to villages and small towns throughout the country is being urged upon Congress by Postmaster General Hitchcock through instructions from President Taft. He has forwarded to the senate and house committees on postoffices and postroads a recommendation that an appropriation of $100,000 be made to put the village delivery service into operation, providing that not more than $1800 a year be allowed for the work at any single office.

At present between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 people residing in small towns have to go to the postoffice to get their mail.

Sun Yat Sen's Head Wanted

Some of my friends were always anxious about my safety, writes Sun Yat Sen in the April Strand, but as to myself—perhaps as a remnant of Chinese fatalism—these things give me little trouble. When my time comes it will come. At Nanking a man once walked into my cabin on board a junk in the early morning.

"Sun," he said, "I am a poor man and I have a wife and many children."

"I understand. You mean that someone has offered you a hundred dollars to betray me?"

"More than that," he said.

"A thousand then?"

"Five thousand, Sun. You are only one man, Sun, and Taszei can have the lives of many. She hates you and will have your head cut off, and then it will be no good to anybody. If you give it to me now it will make us all rich and happy."

"Very true," I said. "My head is worth nothing to me, but it is worth a great deal to you? For if you betrayed me the mandarins would not only take all the money away from you, but your children would go on being poor for thousands of years, and millions of other children. Listen, Jin. I belong to you, and therefore my head is your head. Would you take five thousand dollars for your own head? But go and tell your chief that I am aboard this junk. I shall not stir."

He fell at my feet and begged my pardon. But I was sorry to hear next day that this man had drowned himself, because he said he could not endure the disgrace of having thought of giving me up to my enemies.

Hartman Theater

"She Knows Better Now," which May Irwin will introduce to local theater-goers at the Hartman Theater on Thursday evening, April 11th is a farcical satire, written by Agnes L. Crummins, a graduate of Radcliffe College and a protegee of Prof. George Baker of Harvard, who founded the first school of play writing in America. "She Knows Better Now" has for its principal character a New York society woman, who is built along generous lines of good humor, which she tries to exercise in getting herself and a friend out of difficulties. She goes abroad, meets a Baron, becomes involved in difficulties with the United States customs officers, and spreads a great deal of human philosophy on her journeyings. There is a tender sentiment that permeates throughout the little comedy, a quality which May Irwin's plays have heretofore lacked. She will sing three new songs, by Irving Berlin, author of "Alexander's Rag Time Band." Miss Irwin is supported by the following well known players: Arthur Byron; E. E. Hohenwart, Lionel Glenister, Hugh Jeffery, Muriel Hope, Mary Taylor and Kathryn Kays.

"There are 17,491 Catholic priests in the United States and 13,939 Catholic churches of which 9,256 have resident priests, the other 4,683 being mission churches."

The Emergency Hay Crops

The general failure of the clover seeding of a year ago will intensify the condition of the hay scarcity which now exists, and will cause a break in many crop rotations unless a substitute for the clover crop can be found.

For many years the Ohio Experiment Station has used the Soybean as such a substitute, and with increasing appreciation of this plant as a very valuable addition of the Ohio farmer. Bulletin 237 of this Station, now on the press, gives full details as to the culture of the Soybean, and will be sent free to any farmer who requests it.

Another reinforcement of the hay supply is the mixture of the Canada field pea and oats. This crop may be grown successfully north of the latitude of Columbus, and if properly handled may be made into hay of very excellent quality. A good way of seeding is to sow the peas with the grain drill, setting the drill so as to put the seed three or four inches deep, and sowing the oats in front of the drill, thus giving the oats a shallow covering. About a bushel and a half each of the oats and peas should be sown per acre. The Canada pea may be procured of seed houses in Toronto, Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo and Detroit.

The Canada pea will endure cold as well as oats, but the Soybean is a hot weather plant, and should not be sown before the latter part of May or first of June. It would be quite possible to grow a crop of oat and pea hay and follow this with Soybeans during the same season.

Other substitute hay crops are German millet and Hungarian grass. These are hot weather crops, and should not be sown until the latter half of May. If they are harvested while in bloom there will be very little, if any, danger of unfavorable results from feeding them to horses. About three pecks of seed is required per acre and it should be covered in with a light harrowing. Further information on these and other forage crops is given in Bulletin 70 of the Ohio Experiment Station. Address, Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

FORMER RESIDENT IS MORTALLY WOUNDED

Howard Hickman and "Lige" Anderson, Both Colored, Clash in Jamestown and Hickman Will Die—Woman Over Whom Men Had Trouble Lives in This City.

What will probably terminate in forehead, the bullet lodging in the back portion of his brain inflicting a mortal wound, although the man sent a bullet crashing into the brain of Howard Hickman, his brother-in-law, during a quarrel. Both men are colored, and Hickman is said to be a former resident of this city and bears a black reputation.

Hickman who is about 35 years of age, is powerfully built, while Anderson weighs about 125 pounds. The trouble is said to have occurred over Hickman's wife, a resident of this city.

The shooting occurred at 10:45 o'clock in Anderson's barber shop at Jamestown and bystanders claim the shooting was in self-defense. Hickman entered the shop and advanced upon Anderson who retreated until he reached a counter under which he had a revolver concealed, whipped it out and fired. Hickman fell forward with blood oozing from a hole in his life hardly apparent. Anderson, who had asked for permission to carry a gun and had been refused, surrendered himself to the marshal, and he was later transferred to the Xenia jail to prevent Hickman's friends doing him harm.

It is claimed that Hickman, recently separated from his wife, had beaten Anderson a number of times because he thought Anderson had been too intimate with the woman. The last flogging occurred a week ago when Hickman came to this city, bringing one of his children here to see its mother, and upon his return to Jamestown he went to Anderson's home and thrashed him in the presence of his (Anderson's) wife.

Announcement of Hickman's death is expected at any time.

Lake Gulls in Fayette Thousands Have Starved

A lake gull, killed by a man while out hunting ducks a few days ago, was exhibited upon the streets here and it was some little time before a man was found who was able to identify the bird and enlighten the man who killed it.

A great many of the gulls have made their appearance in Fayette county, following the water courses and living upon fish. Those gulls are said to have been driven inland and thousands of others have died of starvation, as the frozen condition of Lake Erie prevented the gulls from obtaining fish on which they subsist.

At Sandusky the citizens have been feeding the birds to relieve their suffering. The bay at that point is covered with these birds, and they wait day after day for the food placed for them. The butchers, bakers and hotel keepers have been saving scraps for the greedy birds.

The lake gulls are great scavengers and give valuable service in keeping the lake free from impurities. When the lake is open they have no trouble in finding plenty of food, as they sweep down and catch fish in a twinkling.

When the lake is frozen the birds find no fish for food and thousands of them perish. The past winter has been the worst since 1882, when the lakes were frozen for a long time.

Self-Playing Violin

This apparatus is the latest invention of a German musician who worked on the problem for more than seven years and finally succeeded in constructing one machine, which is a combination of a violin and a piano. Our picture shows the upper part which consists of three violins upside down and with the cords pointed outward. They are touched by a round bow. Only one cord is made to sound at a time and one has the impression that a violin expert is playing on it. The combination of these two instruments is put in operation by electricity. By regulating the pneumatic pressure, the different notes are produced and the mechanism is led by a perforated roll, as in use by the player-pianos. The machine is driven by a small motor. The apparatus can be used in five different ways. The piano can be played alone, the violins can be played alone or with piano accompaniment; the piano can be played automatically with electric power, or both instruments can be played together.

Resume of the Coal Industry

Sixty per cent. of all the coal—anthracite and bituminous—mined in the United States comes from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the four states embraced with the so-called Central Competitive Fields now involved in the negotiations between the miners and operators at Cleveland. The report of the statistician of the United Mine Workers of America also shows that the amount of coal mined within the country has practically doubled within a decade, reaching 501,556,378 tons in 1910—the last available figures—as compared with 269,684,027 tons in 1900.

Eighty-two per cent of the half billion tons mined in 1910, the report shows, was bituminous coal. Of anthracite coal there were mined in 1910, 84,485,236 tons by 169,497 workers. Workers in bituminous mines numbered 555,533. The total value of anthracite coal mined in 1910 is estimated at $169,275,302; of the bituminous, $469,281,719. Of the 417,111,142 tons of bituminous coal mined in 1910, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania contributed 69 per cent, or 249,020,255 tons.

The total membership of the United Mine Workers of America, as published in its official report of its proceedings here last January, is 256,256. The report gives the total number of mine workers throughout the country at 725,030.

A large proportion of the bituminous coal is mined by machines, of which there are in use, according to the latest available figures, approximately 14,000. The tonnage thus mined in 1910 was 174,012,293. There were during the year 2,838 fatalities in mines throughout the country, according to the report. Of these 691 occurred in the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania and 539 in the bituminous mines of that state. West Virginia was second in the list with 326. Colorado third, with 323 and Alabama fourth, with 238. The death rate per thousand persons employed in coal mines, compared with the rate in foreign countries, follows: United States, 3.91; Great Britain and Ireland, 1.43; France, 1.17; Austria, 1.04; Prussia, 1.98; Belgium, 1.95.

There are approximately 10,000 local organizations of miners in the twenty-five districts of the United States and Canada, according to the report. Of these approximately 400 are in Districts 1, 5, and 7, the three districts embracing the anthracite fields. The expense of the organization according to the treasurer's report, totaled in 1910 $2,186,331.

Rainbow Parade Moving Picture

The tent city of 1,600 tents on the lake front, which drew a crowd of visitors estimated at 100,000 on opening day. The airship flight over Niagara, the marathon races and many other interesting events of the convention.

The Modern Woodmen society is the largest of its kind in the world, having a membership of over 1,200,000. The members were represented by 788 delegates at the 1911 convention.

FORMER RESIDENT IS MORTALLY WOUNDED

Howard Hickman and "Lige" Anderson, Both Colored, Clash in Jamestown and Hickman Will Die--Woman Over Whom Men Had Trouble Lives in This City.

What will probably terminate in murder took place in Jamestown Saturday night, when "Lige" Anderson sent a bullet crashing into the brain of Howard Hickman, his brother-in-law, during a quarrel. Both men are colored, and Hickman is said to be a former resident of this city and bears a black reputation.

Hickman who is about 35 years of age, is powerfully built, while Anderson weighs about 125 pounds. The trouble is said to have occurred over Hickman's wife, a resident of this city.

The shooting occurred at 10:45 o'clock in Anderson's barber shop at Jamestown and bystanders claim the shooting was in self-defense. Hickman entered the shop and advanced upon Anderson who retreated until he reached a counter under which he had a revolver concealed, whipped it out and fired. Hickman fell forward with blood oozing from a hole in his forehead, the bullet lodging in the back portion of his brain inflicting a mortal wound, although the man still lingers in a state of coma with life hardly apparent.

Anderson, who had asked for permission to carry a gun and had been refused, surrendered himself to the marshal, and he was later transferred to the Xenia jail to prevent Hickman's friends doing him harm.

It is claimed that Hickman, recently separated from his wife, had beaten Anderson a number of times because he thought Anderson had been too intimate with the woman. The last flogging occurred a week ago when Hickman came to this city, bringing one of his children here to see its mother, and upon his return to Jamestown he went to Anderson's home and thrashed him in the presence of his (Anderson's) wife.

Announcement of Hickman's death is expected at any time.

Lake Gulls in Fayette Thousands Have Starved

A lake gull, killed by a man while out hunting ducks a few days ago, was exhibited upon the streets here and it was some little time before a man was found who was able to identify the bird and enlighten the man who killed it.

A great many of the gulls have made their appearance in Fayette county, following the water courses and living upon fish. These gulls are said to have been driven inland and thousands of others have died of starvation, as the frozen condition of Lake Erie prevented the gulls from obtaining fish on which they subsist.

At Sandusky the citizens have been feeding the birds to relieve their suffering. The bay at that point is covered with these birds, and they wait day after day for the food placed for them. The butchers, bakers and hotel keepers have been saving scraps for the greedy birds.

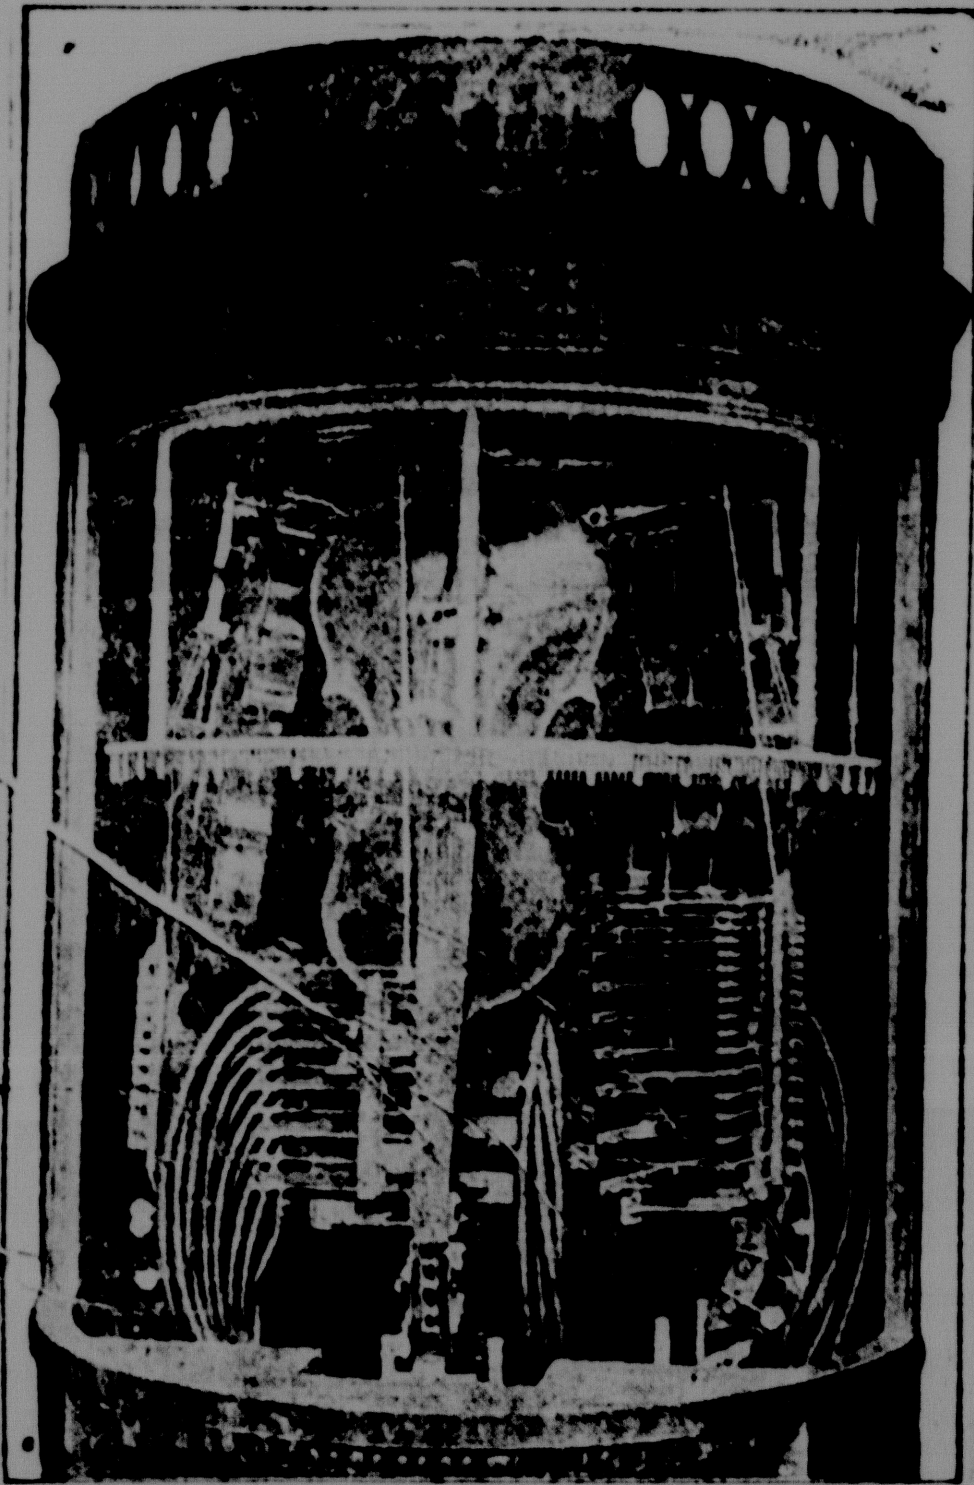

The lake gulls are great scavengers and give valuable service in keeping the lake free from impurities. When the lake is open they have no trouble in finding plenty of food, as they sweep down and catch fish in a twinkling.

When the lake is frozen the birds find no fish for food and thousands of them perish. The past winter has been the worst since 1882, when the lakes were frozen for a long time.

Her Easter Hens

BY SUSANNE GLENN

HENS is mighty poor critters, Miss Letty," said old Jason, the miller, pushing back his mealy cap. "I don't know of nothing that will induce 'em to lay if they ain't ready! This cold, damp spell has sort of put 'em back, I guess. Nobody seems to be getting any eggs but John Danforth. Maybe he can tell you what the trouble is."

"I will try this new mixture, thank you, Jason," returned Miss Letty, crisply. "You will be sure to send it this afternoon?"

"Yes, yes!" said Jason cordially, not reminding her that it was not customary for him to deliver a quarter's worth of feed. And he turned back into the inner office, where a young man was moodily turning over the catalogues on the dusty desk.

"It seems a pity to see 'Square' Brown's daughter buying chicken feed by the pound, John," he remarked seriously. "And I'm afraid them hens mean more to her than we realize. But she's too proud to let anybody know if she half starved!"

"Yes," returned John Danforth, "she is too proud!"

Letty Brown walked down the street wearily. The purse in her handsome alligator bag was menacingly empty. "Just 72 cents after paying for the chicken feed," she figured; "and two weeks before I can draw the $10 interest money. I don't dare draw on the principal—I don't dare! It is so little, and I may need it so much worse some other time. If only the hens would lay!"

Tears of weakness and vexation filled her eyes. At the corner she deviated through a dreary side street; not yet could she bring herself to go past the dear old house where she was born, and which she had been forced to leave that sad November time when her father's death revealed the condition of his finances.

"I ought to be thankful," she reminded herself virtuously, "that I have the cottage, and the hens, and grandmother's legacy."

"If only the legacy were bigger, and the cottage wasn't under the very shadow of John Danforth's big house, and the hens would not refuse to lay," she amended.

An hour later, arrayed in a dingy calico wrapper, Miss Letty went out to her poultry house. The flock rushed noisily to meet her.

"Yes, I have your supper, greedy things," she greeted them; "but how do you repay me? I have watered and fed you all winter; shoveled snow to get to you; never once forgotten you. Yet you have not given me eggs enough to keep me from getting hungry! I cannot keep it up much longer; when this feed is gone, I shall begin roasting you unless you do better!"

After the fowls were made comfortable for the night, Miss Letty did what she had done every day all winter—she looked hopelessly through the square wooden boxes used as nests. In one, high up, was a small brown egg!

"Oh," cried she, holding it carefully in both hands, "something for supper besides bread and tea! I know it is worth three cents, Letty Brown, but I am weak in my knees for something nourishing, so you keep still!"

The little brown egg certainly put new life into the heart-sick girl in the old cottage. Early next morning she was out in the chicken yard, working busily.

"Today," she remarked cheerily, "you must lay two eggs; and tomorrow, four; and the next—but I mustn't get over 14, must I? Well, if you will lay a dozen every day that will make seven dozens a week, for you do not stop work for Sunday. What wealth that will be!"

The weather had changed, and the day was sunny and still. As she worked about the house, Letty listened hopefully for some disturbance from the chicken house. In the adjoining yard there was an incessant clatter of shrill, cackling voices, but her own was ominously silent.

"I don't know as I could hear just one hen cackle above that racket, anyway," she said, a little spitefully, as she scattered the midday feeding over the sunny yard. "Now, understand, I shall expect two eggs tonight!"

Very anxiously Miss Letty groped through the high nests that evening. Again there was one little brown egg! But she continued doggedly to inspect each shadowy box. In the last one, down next to the little door through which the hens ran to the back park in summer, her hand came in contact with something that brought her heart to her throat. Carefully, gingerly, she placed them in the feed pail—nine beautiful brown eggs!

"I do not understand," she murmured, wondering. "It seems too good to be true."

She even nodded kindly to John Danforth when she saw him pottering about his own poultry yards.

"I wonder what he would think if he could know how many eggs I am getting," she thought with a smile of amusement. "He was so certain I did not know how to take care of hens!"

The amusement faded from her face, and she went into her little kitchen and sat down in sudden dejection.

"Why can I not forget?" she cried in bitterest self-scorn. "What a goose I am!"

How she had trusted him! How happy she had been! Even in her childhood he had been her best friend. And then to have him fall a victim to a pair of dancing eyes and a coquetish smile!

"Of course I do not blame him," she said aloud, glancing involuntarily into the mirror opposite. "I know I am plain and little and 'everyday'! But how could I ever trust him again?"

"But he was true, afterward," said an insistent voice within her, "and he wanted to come back!"

"Yes," said Letty proudly, "he wanted to come back to Squire Brown's daughter! But has he ever wanted to come back to Letty Brown of the weather-beaten old cottage?"

"Hasn't he wanted to shovel your paths, and make your garden, and care for your hens?" continued the voice. "And haven't you discouraged him at every turn?"

"I will not have his pity!" flashed the squire's daughter. "He forgot me for a frivolous young thing who never cared for him!"

But he admitted his fault honestly and manfully, and begged your forgiveness."

And Letty seemed to hear again his weary voice.

"Did you never make a mistake, Letty?"

"Not that kind," she had retorted with a crispness for which the Browns were noted.

Miss Letty squared her shoulders determinedly.

"I may as well gather the eggs before supper," she said, in a matter-of-fact way, returning to her prosaic duties.

But where she had smiled hitherto over the fullness of her basket, she frowned bewilderingly. Slowly she counted them over again.

Not there was no mistake about it, fifteen large brown eggs reposed in the basket. Fifteen eggs, and only fourteen hens!

With lips compressed in a displeased line, she scrutinized the building. The front park was close and strong; no wandering hen could possibly enter. The narrow gate in the back park flapped loosely on its leather hinges. And imprinted in the half dry mud, foot marks showed from the neighboring park to the little door at the back of her henhouse! No hen had left that extra egg in her nests!

"John," she called, returning to the front of the building, "will you come over here a moment?"

Danforth leaped the fence lightly. Letty wanted him!

"Here," she said, demurely, holding out the basket, "are your eggs. I am sorry I have sold the others, but I will return the amount as soon as I can."

Her lips quivered a little with the disappointment and humiliation of it all.

"There are fifteen eggs," she could not help smiling at his embarrassed face, "and I have only fourteen hens!"

"Letty," he cried, with sudden vehemence, "I'll take them back. After dark, I'm coming for two hens, also; I can make them lay!"

"And tomorrow I am coming for you, dear. Let us have a happy Easter, sweetheart!"

And there among the feathered flock, he took her in his arms.

"I'll need you, dear," he whispered, "to count the eggs!"

Johnny on Easter.

"My dear teacher has asked me to write a composition on Easter, and I will, therefore, say that it is a day when all rejoice. I asked my mother why we should all rejoice on that day, and she replied that if she couldn't have $2 to buy a new hat with a hen's feather in it my father would be made to think a brick house had struck the back of his neck."

"I asked father why we should rejoice and be glad, and he said that if mother didn't do less gadding and more home work somebody would hear something drop."

"I think we should all rejoice, however. Spring is here and such of us as did not freeze to death in the winter are hearing the songs of the robins and roller skating on one foot."

"There is something about Palm Sunday, but I do not know just what. Last year I saw a boy with a palm in his hand and I asked him why he carried it, and he said he was learning to be a palmist. This is a world in which we are all liars, and so I close by hoping that ma will get Easter and Christmas mixed up and

MINERS CONFIDENT

President Moore Predicts Short Suspension in Ohio.

Columbus, O., April 2.—The district executive board of the Ohio miners met in Columbus today to take up details in connection with the new scale in Ohio. No conference between the Ohio miners and operators on the new scale will be called until after the referendum vote on the policy adopted at Cleveland.

President John Moore of the Ohio miners, who returned to the district headquarters here, said he felt confident that the Cleveland agreement would be ratified by the miners and that the operation of the mines would be resumed in the course of two or three weeks.

Resume Work in Belmont.

Martins Ferry, O., April 2.—Three thousand miners resumed work in Belmont county today. They are employed in the mine of the Etna-Standard and Laughlin plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate company and the Whitaker & Glessner plant of this city. The resumption followed the signing of the scale by the company on permission of the miners' policy committee. Eight thousand other miners in the county will remain out pending the result of the referendum vote.

Wisconsin Holds Primaries.

Milwaukee, April 2.—Wisconsin voters are today expressing their presidential preferences at a statewide primary. LaFollette will capture the 26 delegates to the Chicago convention, but on the Democratic side, where the situation is not complicated with the candidacy of a favorite son, opinion is divided. Politicians are of the opinion that the result will be a test of the popular strength of Wilson and Clarke.

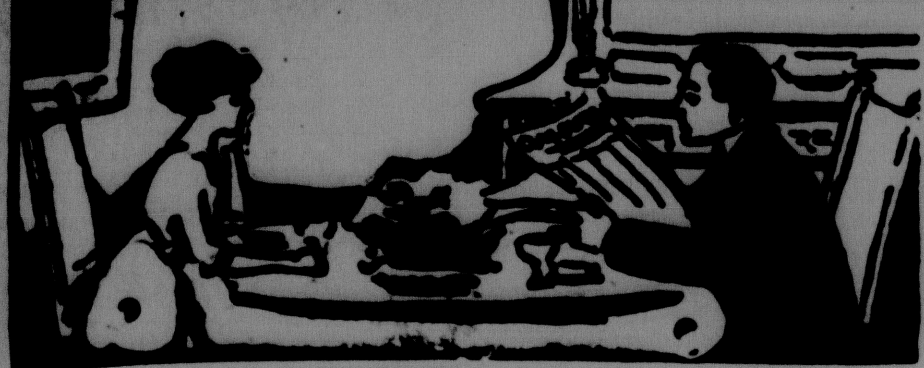

Big Vote at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, April 2.—It is expected that today's election will bring out the largest vote in the city's history. Supporters of Dr. G. D. Bading, non-partisan candidate for mayor, predicted victory by 15,000 votes. Socialist managers of Mayor Seidel's campaign predicted his re-election.

Her Easter Hens

BY SUSANNE GLEN

HENS is mighty poor critters, Miss Letty," said old Jason, the miller, pushing back his mealy cap. "I don't know of nothing that will induce 'em to lay if they ain't ready! This cold, damp spell has sort of put 'em back, I guess. Nobody seems to be getting any eggs but John Danforth. Maybe he can tell you what the trouble is."

"I will try this new mixture, thank you, Jason," returned Miss Letty, crisply. "You will be sure to send it this afternoon?"

"Yes, yes!" said Jason cordially, not reminding her that it was not customary for him to deliver a quarter's worth of feed. And he turned back into the inner office, where a young man was moodily turning over the catalogues on the dusty desk.

"It seems a pity to see 'Square' Brown's daughter buying chicken feed by the pound, John," he remarked, seriously. "And I'm afraid them hens mean more to her than we realize. But she's too proud to let anybody know if she half starved!"

"Yes," returned John Danforth, "she is too proud!"

Letty Brown walked down the street wearily. The purse in her handsome alligator bag was menacingly empty.

"Just 72 cents after paying for the chicken feed!" she figured. "And two weeks before I can draw the $10 interest money. I don't dare draw on the principal—I don't dare! It is so little, and I may need it so much worse some other time. If only the hens would lay!"

Tears of weakness and vexation filled her eyes.

At the corner she deviated through a dreary side street; not yet, could she bring herself to go past the dear old house where she was born, and which she had been forced to leave that sad November time when her father's death revealed the condition of his finances.

"I ought to be thankful," she reminded herself virtuously, "that I have the cottage, and the hens, and grandmother's legacy."

"If only the legacy were bigger, and the cottage wasn't under the very shadow of John Danforth's big house, and the hens would not refuse to lay," she amended.

An hour later, arrayed in a dingy calico wrapper, Miss Letty went out to her poultry house. The flock rushed noisily to meet her.

"Yes, I have your supper, greedy things," she greeted them; "but how do you repay me? I have watered and fed you all winter; shoveled snow to get to you; never once forgotten you. Yet you have not given me eggs enough to keep me from getting hungry! I cannot keep it up much longer; when this feed is gone, I shall begin roasting you unless you do better!"

After the fowls were made comfortable for the night, Miss Letty did what she had done every day all winter—she looked hopelessly through the square wooden boxes used as nests. In one high up, was a small brown egg!

"THE OLD FLIRT"

ANCIENT JAP GARDEN

Famous Temple in Flowery Kingdom 500 Years Old.

Shrubbery Surrounding Edifice Planted Ages Ago—in This Country Trees Are Regarded as Sacred Objects.

Tokio, Japan.—The Golden Temple, one of the most famous Japanese shrines, is not only 500 years old itself, but is surrounded by a garden which also has been growing for centuries. So carefully and artistically has the work been performed that the artifices of the gardener are not very pronounced, with the noticeable exception of the great old pine tree, which grows in a court surrounded on three sides by monastery buildings.

It is trained in the shape of a junk, hull, mast and sail being perfectly reproduced. For centuries the patient priests have bent, pruned, pruned and propped up the limbs and twigs of this tree. And as in Japan a tree is considered chiefly for its age, form and tint, and not for use, this is venerated as a beautiful and sacred object.

In the center of the garden is a lake with pine clad shores and pine covered islets. Each tree in a Japanese garden has its special landscape name, according to its position and purpose in the combination. Pines are always used for a framework in working out a foliage design, says Country Life in America. It is symbolical of unflinching purpose, and its spiny leaves are supposed to be endowed with the power of driving demons away.

The pavilion is a three storied, unpainted wooden building, with projecting roofs and galleries. There are no nails visible, its beams and posts being jointed or fastened with wooden pegs.

It derives its name from the room in the third story whose walls and ceiling and floor in halcyon days were coated with gold; even the frames of the sliding screens, the railing of the balcony, and the small projecting rafters which form the roof of the balcony, were, as careful examination showed, covered with a lacquer of the precious metal. On top of the roof stands a bronze phoenix, or Ho-o bird, about three feet high, with up lifted wings, an attitude of great significance.

WORLD'S OLDEST WOOD DOOR

Said to Have Been Built for Church at Rome 1,500 Years Ago—Made by Peter the Illyrian.

Rome.—The Dominican Order possesses in Rome two churches of great interest, Santa Maria Sopra Minerva in the heart of the city, and Santa Sabina on the Aventine.

The latter during the closing years of St. Dominick's life was his home and headquarters. But the church was already very ancient when he took up his abode there. According to the Rosary it was built A. D. 425, during the pontificate of St. Celestine.

Its founder is commemorated still in the original mosaic inscription dating from 431, on the western wall of the church inside the entrance. The mosaic even now is a splendid relic of a very far distant age.

Remains of the second church are to be seen in the western corridor, or cloister, where are a number of early inscriptions; on one side the original twisted columns of pavonazetto still support the roof, on the other they have been replaced by granite. It was from a window in this cloister that women were allowed to look out upon St. Dominick's orange tree.

The entrance door of the church is so ancient that it is said to be the oldest wooden door in the world; as it dates partly from the fifth century, it may be supposed to have been the original door of the church built by Peter the Illyrian.

Cat Causes Big Fire Loss. Norwalk, Conn.—A cat rubbed against a lamp in the home of Joseph A. McElroy. The fire loss was $25,000. A trunk containing $15,000 worth of jewels was rescued.

To Have Women Conductors. Philadelphia.—Young and pretty women as street car conductors, it is said, will be the latest wrinkle to be introduced by the Philadelphia Traction company.

BOULDERS IN CUZCO'S WALL

Rocks as Large as Houses Are Found in the Ruins of the Palaces of the Incas.

Cuzco.—On the left was a huge wall, part of the line of outer fortifications. On the right a steep bank led down to the rushing stream, which here and there was crossed by an aqueduct and bridges of masonry, solid but very graceful.

An hour's climb brought us to a fairly level plain at the top of the hill. Between us and the valley lay the fortress, its first line of defence rising on our left. Very large and strong walls we had already seen, but they were pygmies compared to the one which now confronted us. To form it boulders of granite and of limestone, some of them as large as a house, had been brought together. No matter how large they were, however, their edges were as carefully trimmed and fitted as bricks in a house. How these masses of rock were ever brought to where they are, raised in position, no one can say. All round the mount the great wall runs, forming a half circle, ending toward the town. There are but few entrances through it, and those are most carefully guarded by flanking masonry.

I have seen the Great Wall of China, the pyramids and temples of Egypt, the fortresses of Japan, and the runs of Baalbec, but none of them are more wonderful than this cyclopean structure. Within this first line of fortifications were two others, which, if not quite as imposing still were of a height and strength amply sufficient to keep at bay any army not provided with gunpowder.

Between them the ground was levelled, supposedly for a moat. If this supposition is correct, the course of the little stream along which we had ridden must have been diverted far back in the hills, for certainly there was no other water obtainable in volume large enough.

Inside the lines was a large plain formed by grading the top of the hill. On the edge of this and overlooking the valley rose the gigantic crucifix that is so plainly visible from Cuzco and beyond. The view is simply magnificent. The city with its narrow streets and numerous churches, lay mapped before us. Beyond it the rich valley and in the distance the snows of Blancopala.—S. S. Howland, in Scribner's Magazine.

"GHOST" SCARES OFF THIEF

Youngstown, O., Woman in Nightgown Appears at Window and Burglar Runs.

Youngstown, O.—Mrs. Peter Truog failed to answer a doorbell owing to the fact that she was ill in bed. A crack of broken glass caused her to arise and investigate.

As she raised the window shade, a burglar's hand was reaching through the broken window to unfasten the catch. The crook uttered a cry of horror as he saw the woman in her night dress, evidently mistaking her for a ghost.

Mrs. Truog, as frightened as the burglar, managed to call the police after she had regained her composure.

Aviators Flee From Rebels. New Orleans.—Matilda Moisant and her squad of fliers, have arrived here, after experiencing exciting times in Mexico. They were billed to give exhibitions in Chihuahua, but fled from the country when rebels attempted to capture their fleet of aeroplanes for use in the war.

Airship Hanga Man. Berlin.—Karl Rogers was hanged when a guide rope from the airship Parseval wrapped about his neck and carried him over 40 feet in the air.

“THE OLD FLIRT”

ANCIENT JAP GARDEN

Famous Temple in Flowery Kingdom 500 Years Old.

Shrubby Surrounding Edifice Planted Ages Ago—in This Country Trees Are Regarded as Sacred Objects.

Tokio, Japan.—The Golden Temple, one of the most famous Japanese shrines, is not only 500 years old itself, but is surrounded by a garden which also has been growing for centuries. So carefully and artistically has the work been performed that the artifices of the gardener are not very pronounced, with the noticeable exception of the great old pine tree, which grows in a court surrounded on three sides by monastery buildings.

It is trained in the shape of a junk; hull, mast and sail being perfectly reproduced. For centuries the patient priests have bent, pruned, pried, tied and propped up the limbs and twigs of this tree. And as in Japan a tree is considered chiefly for its age, form and tint, and not for use, this is venerated as a beautiful and sacred object.

In the center of the garden is a lake with pine clad shores and pine covered islets. Each tree in a Japanese garden has its special landscape name, according to its position and purpose in the combination. Pines are always used for a framework in working out a foliage design, says Country Life in America. It is symbolical of unflinching purpose, and its spiny leaves are supposed to be endowed with the power of driving demons away.

The pavilion is a three storied, unpainted wooden building, with projecting roofs and galleries. There are no nails visible, its beams and posts being jointed or fastened with wooden pegs.

It derives its name from the room in the third story whose walls and ceiling and floor in halcyon days were coated with gold; even the frames of the sliding screens, the railing of the balcony, and the small projecting rafters which form the roof of the balcony, were, as careful examination showed, covered with a lacquer of the precious metal. On top of the roof stands a bronze phoenix, or ho-o bird, about three feet high, with up-lifted wings, an attitude of great significance.

WORLD'S OLDEST WOOD DOOR

Said to Have Been Built for Church at Rome 1,500 Years Ago—Made by Peter the Illyrian.

Rome.—The Dominican Order possesses in Rome two churches of great interest, Santa Maria Sopra Minerva in the heart of the city, and Santa Sabina on the Aventine.

The latter during the closing years of St. Dominick's life was his home and headquarters. But the church was already very ancient when he took up his abode there. According to the Rosary it was built A. D. 425, during the pontificate of St. Celestine.

Its founder is commemorated still in the original mosaic inscription dating from 431, on the western wall of the church inside the entrance. The mosaic even now is a splendid relic of a very far distant age.

Remains of the second church are to be seen in the western corridor, or cloister, where are a number of early inscriptions; on one side the original twisted columns of pavonazetto still support the roof, on the other they have been replaced by granite. It was from a window in this cloister that women were allowed to look out upon St. Dominick's orange tree.

The entrance door of the church is so ancient that it is said to be the oldest wooden door in the world; as it dates partly from the fifth century, it may be supposed to have been the original door of the church built by Peter the Illyrian.

Cat Causes Big Fire Loss.

Norwalk, Conn.—A cat rubbed against a lamp in the home of Joseph A. McElroy. The fire loss was $35,000. A trunk containing $15,000 worth of jewels was rescued.

To Have Women Conductors.

Philadelphia.—Young and pretty women as street car conductors, it is said, will be the latest whim to be introduced by the Philadelphia Traction company.

BOULDERS IN CUZCO'S WALL

Rocks as Large as Houses Are Found in the Ruins of the Palaces of the Incas.

Cuzco.—On the left was a huge wall, part of the line of outer fortifications. On the right a steep bank led down to the rushing stream, which here and there was crossed by an aqueduct and bridges of masonry, solid but very graceful.

An hour's climb brought us to a fairly level plain at the top of the hill. Between us and the valley lay the fortress. Its first line of defence rising on our left. Very large and strong walls we had already seen, but they were pygmies compared to the one which now confronted us. To form it boulders of granite and of limestone, some of them as large as a house, had been brought together. No matter how large they were, however, their edges were as carefully trimmed and fitted as bricks in a house. How these masses of rock were ever brought to where they are, raised in position, no one can say. All round the mount the great wall runs, forming a half circle, ending toward the town. There are but few entrances through it, and those are most carefully guarded by flanking masonry.

I have seen the Great Wall of China, the pyramids and temples of Egypt, the fortresses of Japan, and the runs of Baalbec, but none of them are more wonderful than this cyclopean structure. Within this first line of fortifications were two others, which, if not quite as imposing still were of a height and strength amply sufficient to keep at bay any army not provided with gunpowder.

Between them the ground was levelled, supposedly for a moat. If this supposition is correct, the course of the little stream along which we had ridden must have been diverted far back in the hills, for certainly there was no other water obtainable in volume large enough.

Inside the lines was a large plain formed by grading the top of the hill. On the edge of this and overlooking the valley rose the gigantic crucifix that is so plainly visible from Cuzco and beyond. Orders Censure Of News

Leased Wire Confiscated.

Every effort is being made by the government to suppress all news. The leased wire of a press association has been seized, and so far as possible no news is allowed to enter or leave the republic.

The American ambassador, it is said, had written to President Madero demanding the expulsion of a number of correspondents. One hundred and fifty Americans met at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. and elected officers for the purpose of forming a military company. They are in fear that their arms will be taken from them by the government. The police force on duty has been doubled and cavalry is patrolling the streets.

Word has reached here that General Zapata is preparing to attack the city of Puebla. A battle is expected there, but nothing is known of the late developments because of the military censorship, which is very strict. No news has been received here from Torreón.

Karl C. Banks, of the Atlantic Refining Co., of Pittsburgh, had sore on his ankle for a year. He doctored, and tried various remedies, without relief. He says: "San Cura Ointment worked like a charm; reduced the swelling and healed the sore in two weeks."
